

RITA AND THE ROGUES

Live at 9:30 PM

“What makes people strong is their ability to keep a secret,” said Jean Leon. No doubt he kept many, both his own and those of others. The most delicate among them: the last night of Marilyn’s life (August 5th, 1962).

Marilyn most likely called him, because she wanted to dine at home. Jean Leon, owner of the famous La Scala restaurant, personally delivered one of her favorites: fettuccini. In fact, every dish on the menu was named after a star. One of the most memorable was, of course, the “Fettuccini Marilyn,” which, as one might expect, President John Fitzgerald Kennedy was particularly fond of...*

Here is our imagined menu had Marilyn decided to dine-in rather than take-out that night. Perhaps things would have ended differently...
